

New Data Needed: Improving New Jersey's Enforcement of Employee Misclassification Laws

50 Rutgers L. Rec. 248 (2023) | WestLaw | LexisNexis | PDF Introduction

In the United States, thousands of employees in the private sector are misclassified as independent contractors.¹ Employers have used misclassification to withhold workers' benefits such as well-earned wages, benefits, and sick leave.² This has a deleterious effect on working conditions and a cumulative effect on income inequality.³ The rise of employee misclassification has both federal and state governments scrambling to enforce employee misclassification statutes with mixed results.⁴ Although some states use a broader definition of what constitutes an employee to enforce employee misclassification, the number of misclassifications demonstrates effective enforcement is still an ongoing issue.⁵ Because of this lack of effective enforcement, employee misclassification persists in the workforce.⁶
